Workshop Series: PR for Academics

Presented by communications expert Simon Clews, the PR for Academics series of workshops aims to assist HDR candidates to spread the word about their amazing work beyond the walls of the academy to the hugely interested audiences outside.

Just Write Better and Less is More

It's always about the words; the better the writing, the more effective your communication will be. It's as simple as that. This session looks at getting the best words down on the page, and then editing them until they are perfect.

Writing for newspapers and magazines and The Conversation

Newspapers, magazines and their digital counterparts are great vehicles for reaching large audiences outside the academy. And The Conversation is a great starting point for this.

The Business of Writing

The craft and creativity of writing are essential if your stories are to make good reads. But, without an understanding of the business side of the process, your stories may never see the light of day and reach the audiences that are keen to see them.

Telling Great Stories

Storytelling is the key to effective communication. Research has shown time and time again that data couched in terms of a narrative will be more engaging, persuasive and memorable. This session will look at the key elements of storytelling and explore how to make your research come alive in the same way that great books, movies and theatre do.
